

Capstone Project - The Battle of Neighborhoods (Week 1)

Introduction

Toronto has the largest Indo-Canadian population in Canada. Almost 51% of the entire The Indo-Canadian community resides in the Greater Toronto Area. Most Indo-Canadians in the Toronto area live in Brampton, Markham, Scarborough, Etobicoke, and Mississauga. Indo-Canadians, particularly, Punjabi Sikhs, have a particularly strong presence in Brampton, where they represent about a third of the population (Most live in the northeastern and Eastern portion of the city). The area is middle and upper-middle class, homeownership is very high. The Indo-Canadians in this region are mostly of Punjabi, Telugu, Tamil, Gujarati, Marathi, Malayalee and Goan origin. When compared to the Indo-Canadian the community of Greater Vancouver, the Greater Toronto Area is home to a much more diverse community of Indians – both linguistically and religiously. Canadian carrier Air Canada operates flights from Toronto Pearson International Airport back to India.

Indo-Canadians in the Greater Toronto Area have an average household income of $86,425, which is higher than the Canadian average of $79,102 but lower than the Toronto Census Metropolitan Area's average of $95,326. Indo-Canadian students are also well-represented in Toronto-area universities; despite Indo-Canadians making up 10% of the Toronto area's population, students of Indian origin make up over 35% of Ryerson University, 30% of York University, and 20% of the University of Toronto's student bodies, respectively.
